WHAT WE SEE

A sound house with two things to settle before any money changes hands: how your bank treats a lease with 71 years left, and the kitchen extension that is not on the approved plan. Neither is unusual. Both should be answered in writing before you sign.

RISKS

	Area	What we found	Why it matters	Based on
Resolve before signing	Lease	Leasehold to 2097: 71 years left.	Banks look at the years left when deciding how much and for how long to lend. It also matters to whoever buys from you later.	Title search
Resolve before signing	Extension	The kitchen extension at the back is not on the approved plan we were shown.	Unapproved works can bring a council notice, and some banks will not lend on them.	Approved plan and site photos
Ask before signing	State consent	The title carries a restriction in interest: a transfer needs the state's consent.	Consent takes weeks and has a fee. The agreement should allow the time and say who pays.	Title search
Ask before signing	Arrears	No receipts for this year's quit rent or assessment.	Unpaid amounts can follow the property. The agreement usually makes the seller clear them.	Documents provided
Keep in view	Drainage	The back-lane drain was blocked in the photos.	Standing water brings damp and mosquitoes. Worth a look after heavy rain.	Site photos

QUESTIONS TO ASK

Your bank

01 How much will you lend, and for how many years, on a leasehold with 71 years left?

Your lawyer

02 How long does state consent take here, and who pays its fee?

03 If my loan is not approved, does the agreement return my deposit?

The seller

04 Was the kitchen extension approved by the council? May we see the approval letter?

05 When were the roof and the wiring last redone?

The neighbours

06 Does the back lane flood after heavy rain?

NEXT STEPS

☐ Get your bank's answer on the lease, in writing.

☐ Ask the seller for the extension's approval letter.

☐ Have your lawyer check the title, the consent timeline and the arrears.

☐ Book the 15-minute pre-signing review (half fee) before you pay the deposit.

FROM YOUR ADVISER

Good house, good street. Get the bank's answer on the lease first; the rest follows from it.
